In the news this week

Ade Adepitan became the first wheelchair user to take part in TV gameshow, 'I'm a Celebrity...Get Me Out of Here!', set in the Australian jungle. Before the series began, Ade visited the camp and worked with the production team to plan changes for his access needs, including adapted pathways, wheelchair parking bays and a stairlift to the shower. Although Ade helped prepare the camp, the trials and other planned surprises were kept secret from him, just like for the other contestants.

Things to talk about at home ...

- What makes a place easy for some people to use but difficult for others?
- Think of a journey you take regularly (e.g., travelling to school). What barriers might some people face?
- Can you think of a change that helped someone take part?
- If we noticed a barrier, who could we talk to about changing it?
